A TWO DAY INTENSIVE TRAINING COURSE

WHO SHOULD ATTEND?

Drafting contracts in English is ideal for lawyers working in English as a foreign language who need to draft, explain or interpret contract clauses written in English.

DRAFTING CONTRACTS IN ENGLISH

Most international commercial agreements are drafted in English, irrespective of the nationality of the contracting parties.

Drafting contracts in English is ideal for lawyers working in English as a foreign language who need to draft, explain or interpret contract clauses written in English.

During the course delegates will look at a wide variety of commercial agreements through to practical drafting sessions.

The course is suitable for those with up to an advanced level of English but who have no lower than an intermediate level.

This course will help delegates to draft confidently and effectively in English, developing skills in drafting clearly, simply and accurately, whatever the governing law.

The course will include an abundance of practical exercises throughout including restructuring and redrafting poorly drafted clauses.
